CAPT. FRANK MOELSCHER AND CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

That "Death loves a shining mark" was indeed verified when she chose our subject for her victim. It was like the going down of the sun in all its richness and sublime beauty in the first hour of a new day; like the abrupt closing of an interesting book with the beginning of the story—the closing of a half bloom rose, like a cloud hiding the golden rifts of a bright and glorious noon day sun—yes, when life seemed fairest and best to "Jean" the shadow of death fell across her sky.

"When the voice of joy is clearest. When the crow of hope is nearest. When the heart of youth is lightest. When the light of love is brightest. Then is death."

Eugenia Kriebs had all the charms of mind, person, heart, and manner that makes one attractive—her sweet young beauty was exquisite and rare while with a rich store of love in her heart, she won to herself the love of those around her, but 'tis sadly true, she is dead. We feel as though some sweet tone in nature's harmony had ceased forever, that a link in the chain of love and friendship had been broken; a modest flower faded timelessly. But a thousand sweet tender recollections of her are deathless in the minds of those who knew and loved her well. We know that words of sympathy seem almost like mockery to the bereaved sufferers, yet we should remember a star in heaven is brighter than a flower on earth and that only God and time can bring comfort to the broken home. In one sense we should feel grateful and submissive to the plans of an all wise father that after breathing the soft fresh air of morning she passed away before the dark coming of the evening tempest, that she tasted the rich wine of life, and turned away ere the wormwood and gall were pressed to her lips, while the years were young and in their tenderest bloom. She was so young to die so joyous and happy it seemed that to her life was worth while, and full of sunshine but we do not understand God's way, perhaps sometimes somewhere we may know why this bright young life faded so soon with its wealth of love joy, for to us—

"His comfort comes thro' pain, His tender hand the heavy burden lifts, And hope shines thro' the clouds in golden rifts, Clear shining after rain."

The remains were tenderly laid away beneath a profusion of fragrant flowers and an unusually large crowd showed the high regards in which she was held. To the bereaved family we offer a tender sympathy.

Mr. Goliday had been a resident of this vicinity upwards of thirty-two years and numbered his friends by the score. He was born in Lynchburg, Va., and had reached the age of 74 years and 9 months. He was the father of 13 children, ten of whom with their mother, survive to mourn the loss of a kind parent and a loving devoted husband.
